THE "HOLDING COMPANY"

"NOBODY'S BUSINESS."

By Julian Capers, Jr.

(The opinions here expressed are Mr. Caper's own and do not necessarily represent those of this paper .-

ASTIN, Feb. 15 .- Two hopeful developments for the growing number of Texans who believe that something more is necessary than a mere belief in "economy in government and abolition of useless bureaus"the litany of every aspiring politician -if any real progress toward curbing wasteful expenditure of tax funds, have occurred recently.

The first of these is the announced plan of Senator John Redditt of Lufkin, chairman of the Senate finance committee, to begin work within 30 |* days on the biennial appropriation bills for 1938-39. He heads a special Senate committee to which this task has been delegated, including Senators Harold Beck of Texarkana; A. M. Aiken, Jr., of Paris; Vernon Lemens, of Rainbow and Morris Roberts, of Pettus. All are holdovers, not up for re-election.

New Proceedure

The plan is a distinct departure, and holds promise of an intelligent approach to the vexing business of appropriating funds to operate the State's departments. Redditt favors a single appropriation bill to finance the departmental, educational eleemosynary, judiciary and rural school aid operations. He hopes to have the bill ready to place in the hands of the legislators early in the fall, soon after the elections, so that time can be had for comprehensive study. Heretofore, too often, the appropriation bills have been hastily drafted, and more hastily passed in the dying hours of the regular session, with inadequate consideration resulting in inevitable waste and extravagance. By having a single bill, drafted after approved by a single conference one. The Board of Control in recent years has become so burdened with a multitude of other duties delegated by the Legislature, including relief, old age penions, and other new activities that its members do not have time to do the budgeting job properly.

Other Needs Listed. Next in importance, according to those interested in economy, is the need for laws doing away with the 99 special funds in the State treasury, placing all the state's income in a single general fund, from which appropriations are made by the Legislature to the various departments and agencies. This could be accomplished by passage of simple statute, except for school funds, which are ear-marked by constitutional provission.

Another reform which could be accomplished by a simple statute is a change in the state's auditing methods. The State Auditor now is appointed by the Governor. Reformists believe the auditor should be responsible solely to the Legislature, and that he should be without political appearance of District Judge Ralph affiliations or influences, with a long Yarborough before a legislative comtenure of office, and sufficient staff mittee a year ago when he eloquentand funds to see to it that everyly opposed certain features of legispeny of State funds is expended as lation which he contended would directed by the law-makers. This does not take into account local taxes collected on an advalorem basis by local taxing units. During 1936 (the last year for which complete figures from other states are available), all of the other 47 States in the union collected in severance taxes on natural resources $17,443,000. Thus, the figures indicate that Texas natural resources paid last year more in severance taxes to the State than all of the other states combined collected from producers of natural resources within their borders. The figures are offered in support of the claim of these industries that they are bearing more than their share of the tax burden and cannot pay further increases and remain in competition with other

Any intelligently made, unbiased study of the tax situation, which keeps away from personalities and politics, should be helpful in Texas, because the State's present tax setup is a terrible hodge-podge of legislation passed at various times, without scientific determination of the facts, and frequently as a result of political manipulation, rather than careful thinking which ought to characterize the business management of an institution which spends $150,000,000 a year in its operation, as the State does.

TODAY'S TAXOGRAM.

The family with an average income of $150 per month pays on the average of $19.10 each month to the tax collector-not in direct taxation, but by the in-direct, or "hidden" tax route, a study by the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company shows. For instance, the food bill for such a family averages $43.50 per month, the study re- * vealed. Of that amount, $3.09 * represented taxes hidden by the cost of the articles purchased. The same family pays on the average of $30 per month for rent, and of this amount $7.59 * goes, in some way or other, to the tax bill.

-WS-

In Washington very few things may be taken at their face value. So it is with the atmosphere of serenity and peace that seems to surround Capitol Hill now that the antilynching bill is being shoved aside.

Another issue has been boiling and bubbling under cover for months now and it is about ready to blow the cover off. It involves the government reorganization scheme.

At the moment there seems to be but few friends for the measure in Congressional quarters. The principal complaint is that it will give too much power to the executive branch of government-and Congress isn't in a power-giving-to-the-executive mood these days.

The battle over the scheme, when it starts, will probably make the hair

A study of the list of those "Little Businessmen" asked in recent days to the White House for conferences on problems of the day discloses some interesting things. One invitee was a janitor in Florida for 17 years. Another was a WPA day laborer. Still and Mrs. J. F. Biry. another has been living on a veteran's disability pension since the World War. And another was a New York taxi driver. And so on down the line. -WS-

There's a new twist these days to the controversy that has been raging between the Justice Department and the Federal District Judge in Milwaukee. The twist is that the Justice Department may be subjected to the first comprehensive investigation in Mrs. P. Eichhorn spent Sunday at La-

It all came about recently when the Department asked the House Judiciary Committee to investigate Mr. and Mrs. Ed Pader. Judge Ferdinand A. Geiger, who has sat on the Federal district bench for 25 years. The Judge had discharged a Federal Grand Jury investigating hartz. alleged violations of the anti-trust laws after learning that the Justice Department had used confidential testimony given before the jury as a "club" in an effort to obtain "consent decrees" from the group of defendants.

Judge Geiger's action, which he declared was not only within the law but also in accordance with the best ethics of the law, nullified the work of the grand jury.

The Justice Department's complaint against the Judge has found little smypathy among legal experts in Congress who believe in the sanctity of guarantees under the common law, and who believe that the Justice Department has violated these sanctities by misusing confidential testimony. So the word is around that the Judiciary Committee may have an official look into the Depart-men's own "ethics". -WS-

The American Federation of Labor's action in ordering its affiliates to quit Labor's Non-Partisan League wasn't much of a surprise around the Capital City. After all, about the only thing was to make farmers mad by asking them to join labor in a farm-labor party-while unions were pulling sit-down strikes which increased the farmers' cost of living. And then, too, the League has been pretty closely aligned with the C. I.

TAX SUITS CONTINUED IN HONDO COURT.

Attorney F. X. Vance was over from Hondo Friday, looking after his clients and visiting his mother. He said the tax suits filed by the school district and city of Devine were all postponed in District court. It seems that under a new law all parties interested in delinquent taxes have to file simultaneously against the party being sued. It would take a good attorney, we suppose to tell just how complicated our tax laws are at present.

Black Cat Solved Murder Mystery By H. RAY WALKER

******** (@ by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WNU Service.)

IP THE stairs scampered the black Cat, as the ancient clock clanged 10 and the wind howled a mournful

Alone I sat in the lower hall, Hsgening to the kerchug-kerchug of the old-feshioned registrar of time and gatching the antics of the cat. Within a few feet of where I sat two men had met death mysteriously during the last six months. John SImon had been a naturalist and a bachelor. He had rented the house Beneath horizons rim lowing the day on which he moved lowing the lowing the lower body was found at the Gave light when things were dim. foot of the stairs. The coroner pronounced it heart disease, but when Never a time so cold and bleak Alfred Lozier, another tenant, met the same fate three months later, the light their dazzling the same late the property, Frank Judson, To worthy contemplating. called on me to investigate.

"Sure, I know who done it," said Gudlow, decisively. "Judson knows, Brought courage for tomorrow. too, only he won't admit it. Them two men were killed by the old in- Never a day has come to end, ghost. McKee lived in the house a In thoughts, or words, in deeds or year ago, and he seemed an all right sort of a man until he got taken sick, and the way he raved then made me think he must be crazy. The day he died he called me to him and said:

"Gudlow, I'm going to die; but I'll haunt this place forever. I'm taking If I had not dreamedmean death to many. But only Demon And become like these knows the secret, and he'll never ten." The caretaker then explained that Demon was his black cat, which had In goodness. But I dreamed! been accustomed to spend considerable time with the old inventor and who even now frequented the house. When I entered the house of mystery there was the black cat, and he And all because-I dreamed! interested me strongly, particularly on account of the supposed secret he held in his brain. For the third time I watched him skip up the stairs, wheel at the landing and retrace his steps. Suddenly my conscious mind grasped a fact with which my subconscious brain had been juggling. Each time, in ascending and descendabout midway in the flight, the step against which the big clock seemed to

It was about time for me to get busy, so I picked up the smoky lantern and mounted the stairs. Pausing on the tenth step, I examined the eleventh, but it looked no different from the others. At the top of the flight I turned right and encountered a door which admitted me to a bed-

The room was partly furnished, and I lay down on the bed after extinguishing the lantern and placing my flashlight and automatic conveniently

When the midnight hour began to clang I sat up, possessed of an inexplicable conviction that something was about to happen. Scarcely had the twelfth stroke died away when a loud, flapping noise came up from the first floor. I sprang from the bed, with the flashlight in one hand and the revolver in the other. The noise had ceased, but began again as I passed into the upper hall. It lasted only a moment, then all was quiet except the clock-and the wind.

The flashlight found the explanation of the hiss. It showed the black cat standing on the bottom step, his up, his eyes blazing at me like fiery emeralds

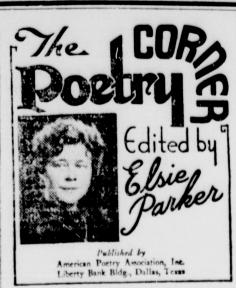

Guided by the flashlight, every nerve taut, I finally reached the step which was the tenth from the top. Bending over I held the light close to the eleventh-and there partly I solved the double murder mystery, although the horrifying discovery for a moment threatened to congeal the blood in my body.

The rest of the solution was in the big clock. I had all along believed, apparently without reason, that the huge timepiece had something to do with it, and the revelation on the eleventh step sent me hurrying to the clock, which I proceeded to dissect with the aid of some tools I found on the premises.

An intricate device, which included a strong spring aside from the one that gave power to the hands, was deftly concealed from any one winding the time machinery. In a way this device was like that of an alarm clock, only instead of ringing a bell it unfolded a thin steel arm, which extended itself and rapped against the glass face of the clock. This occurred every twenty-four hours, at midnight.

The rapping against the glass served as the lure to get the dead inventor's victims to the eleventh step. The same device controlled mechanism under the step, which at midnight thrust twenty needles in two rows through tiny holes in the step, causing them to rise about a third of an inch above the surface.

This double row of needles, extending across the step, comprised the discovery I had made while descending the stairs. As I suspected I found that the needles were hollow and contained a virulent poison which was injected into the veins of him who chanced to step with his bare foot on the eleventh step at the mid-

MEDINA COUNTY IS PROMISED PLAY.

Medina County is promised a new play on account of the R. W. Fair No. Medina Irrigated Farms in the Southwest corner of Bexar County, near the Medina County line. It came in making 20 barrels daily of 32 gravity oil from the Anacacho at 1,140 feet, having been completed several days ago. Since that time operators who have spent many years in South Texas have been rechecking all of Southern Medina County, with the result that there will likely be new activity.

The small fields in Medina County prove that there are accumulations of oil in that territory and the new pool, accentuates the situation.

It is well known to the oil fraternity that Medina County has several well-defined faults that received conbachelor. He morning fol- But that some worthy thought or ago. Nearly all of the tests drilled siderable attention 10 or more years at that time showed oil and gas in paying quantities. However, the method of bringing in wells was crude compared with present methods, in those days it being nearly necessary to bring in a gusher before operators would consider it a new field.

There is a well-defined strike running from the Batesville Field in Northern Zavala County crossing the Pagenkopf discovery well in the part of Medina County through Devine then into Bexar County, through the Somerset Field to the oil fields of Luling and Seguin.

On this strike was worked out a well-defined fault in Medina County by the well of L. O. Whyman who -CLAUDE D. PERRY, had interested most of the major companies. Mr. Whyman, however, died about the time the well was spudded in and the drilling was turned over to contract work which Mr. Whyman had expected to supervise personally.

This well was drilled on the Crawford Farm about five miles west of Devine on the Zigzag Road in survey No. 478. Bottom hole money was put up by some of the major companies. The first test proved Mr. Whyman's geology, as a gas well could have been brought in at around 1,800 feet. Bottom hole money proved detrimental as one condition stipulated -LOREE PITTS DOAK, that the well was to be drilled into Cleburne, the Edwards, and no effort was made to bring in the gasser, with the test carried to the Edwards and abandoned in that formation.

A second test was later drilled under different drilling arrangements and an effort made to bring in a gasser as arrangements had been made for the use of the gas by a near-by ing the cat had leaped over a step Or a blue sea on which white boats pipe line company running to San Antonio. ### Scouts Hold First Meeting in W.O.W. Hall

TIME SPENT PRACTICING TENDERFOOT REQUIREMENTS

Scoutmaster G. R. Smartt met with nineteen boys in the Woodmen of the World Lodge Hall last Tuesday night for their first regular Boy Scout meeting. At this meeting the boys started work on the tests which they must pass before they can become Tender foot Scouts. These tests, as well as the dues which are fifty cents a year, are requirements of the National Boy Scout Association of New York. The colors chosen by the boys for pupils in a studio recital at her and filed in the library for future their neckerchiefs were red and gold.

The scouts, who realized that they had not sufficient knowledge to pass Mothers of the pupils were invited next Wednesday, February 16, to Medina County Basketball title in the tests Tuesday night, practiced tying and identifying nine different kinds of knots, also a requirement of the Tenderfoot Scout. The complete test which includes the recitation of the oath and the twelve divisions of the law of scouts, have not been passed by any boy in the division, other than members of previous scout troops.

When the troop becomes better organized and all the boys have passed their Tenderfoot tests, the troop will be divided into patrols, each patrol having a maximum of eight boys. This will be necessary for convenience when the scouts start their hikes.
